

The English Army at Sedgemoor
6 July 1685

Commander: The Earl of Feversham
2ic: Colonel John Churchill

The Order of Battle at Approx. 1:30 am, from right to left:

The Royal Regiment of Horse (7 troops)
commanded by Major Sir Francis Compton
The Royal Regiment of Foot
(5 companies including one of Grenadiers commanded by Lt Colonel Archibald Douglas)
The Royal Regiment of Foot Guards, in 2 battalions 1st Bn 7 companies including one of Grenadiers, commanded by the Regimental Colonel The Duke of Grafton 2nd Bn 6 companies commanded by Major William Eaton
The 2nd or Coldstream Regiment of Foot Guards (6 companies) commanded by Lt Colonel Edward Sackville
The Queen Consort's regiment of Foot
(5 companies including one of Grenadiers commanded by Colonel Percy Kirke)
The Royal Regiment of Dragoons (3 troops) commanded by Colonel John Churchill

In Reserve:

One (composite) Troop of the Royal regiment of Horse Guards commanded by Lt Colonel Francis Villiers

To these must be added the approximately 3,000 men of the Wiltshire, Devon and Somerset Trained Bands which were available as a 'final reserve'; and one troop of the Royal regiment of Dragoons guarding the crossing of the River Parrett at Langport.

Ede-Borrett, S., The Army of James II, Leeds 1987